Steal these. Seriously.

AI is the fastest way to win back the hours you lose every week to writing, following up, and prepping. These five prompts are the ones we see work best for real estate agents — paste them into any AI chat tool and tweak the [brackets] for your deal.

One honest note as you use them: a prompt gives you a great draft. It won't answer your phone at 9pm, send the follow-up on day 7, or call back the lead you missed. That gap — between a good draft and the work actually getting done — is exactly what RealtyBoss closes. You'll see a ■ note under each prompt showing how.

PROMPT 1

The Listing Description Writer

Every agent writes these constantly — and most dread it. This one nails the tone and stays fair-housing safe.

You are an expert real estate copywriter. Write a compelling MLS listing description for a [beds]BR/[baths]BA [property type] in [neighborhood, city]. Key features: [list features]. Highlight [top selling point]. Give me three versions: a punchy 50-word social version, a standard 150-word MLS version, and a luxury-toned version. Avoid fair-housing-sensitive language — no references to family status, religion, or ideal buyer type.

■ RealtyBoss's Marketing teammate writes these automatically from your listing data — in English and ■■.

PROMPT 2

The Lead Follow-Up Sequence

Follow-up is the #1 thing agents know they're losing deals on. This builds a full multi-touch sequence in seconds.

You are a real estate follow-up specialist. Write a 5-touch follow-up sequence for a [buyer/seller] lead who [inquired about a listing / requested a home valuation / went quiet after a showing]. Mix channels: 2 texts, 2 emails, 1 call script. Keep texts under 160 characters, warm and non-pushy. Space them over 14 days. End each with a soft call-to-action.

■ This is exactly what the RealtyBoss Sales teammate runs on autopilot — it actually sends them, and calls back missed leads within minutes.

PROMPT 3

The Instant CMA Narrative

Turns raw comps into a persuasive listing-appointment script — and preps you for the seller's objections.

You are a listing presentation expert. I'm preparing a CMA for a seller at [address]. Given these comps: [paste 3–5 comps with price, sqft, beds/baths, sale date], write the pricing narrative I'll present: explain the suggested list-price range, justify it against the comps, address why their home is worth [more/less] than they think, and prep me for the top 3 objections a seller might raise.

■ RealtyBoss generates the full AI CMA — comps, narrative, and a branded seller presentation — in about 60 seconds.

PROMPT 4

The Neighborhood Expert Guide

Reusable gold for buyer packets, farming, and website content. Positions you as the local authority.

You are a local real estate market expert. Create a buyer-facing neighborhood guide for [neighborhood, city]. Cover: lifestyle and vibe, who tends to love living here, commute options, school reputation (general, no ratings), dining and amenities, and the type of homes and price range. Write it warm and specific, about 400 words, positioned to help a relocating buyer picture their life there.

■ RealtyBoss builds these into your marketing and client portal automatically.

PROMPT 5

The Objection-Handling Coach

Interactive role-play that feels like a private coaching session. Deeply useful before a tough appointment.

You are a top-producing real estate coach. Role-play with me. You'll play a [seller who wants to overprice / buyer nervous about rates / lead who says 'we're just looking' / FSBO who won't pay commission]. Present the objection, wait for my response, then coach me on a stronger reply and explain the psychology behind it. Run 3 rounds.

■ RealtyBoss's coaching tracks turn this into ongoing, personalized practice.
